I am a HK Government Pensioner.

The Families Clinics are not working; they are underfunded, poorly equipped and are unable to access the HA or HD computer systems. I recently underwent exactly the same set of tests by both the Families Clinics and the HA and TKO Hospital because the HA and the HD do not talk to each other. How much money is being wasted because of this?

There should be at least one Families Clinic in the NT where far more serving and retired officers now live; why is there not?

Large numbers of serving and retired officers have given up on the Families Clinics because of this and have gone private? Is this government policy?

Should they perhaps not admit this and close the clinics and allow retired officers a quota at HA clinics instead?

Should the HA and HD be amalgamated again to save bureaucracy and waste?
